

The press of San Francisco is by far the most provincial upon the continent. The widening of a street, the laying of a poultee pavement, the rate of taxation—any small local interest or issue, however petty, will fill the columns of our local metropolitan contemporaries with the most agonizing sensations.—Record Union.

The jealousies which control the press of San Francisco would make outsiders laugh if they but knew the inner workings. Some of the newspapers take grounds on the leading questions merely because rival newspapers take opposite grounds.

They war over the most trivial matters like so many school girls, and the editorial columns are governed more by the interests of the business office than anything else. They are peevish, petty and sensational, and while boasting of their independence have very little of it. Some of the leading questions of the day they dare not discuss or even allude to because "the Powers" pull the strings over them, and they must be silent.

While assuming a highly moral tone editorially their advertising columns teem with the announcements of well known harlots who call upon their patrons to visit them at their regular places of business. A country newspaper which would publish this class of advertising could not live six months.

THE OLD THING.

Whenever Ireland is on the eve of a great political victory it can be depended on to lay aside the ethics of debate and everything else and pick up the black-thorn.

This has happened over and again and will doubtless continue to happen for many years to come.

The recent riots between the Parnell and McCarthy factions bury all prospects for Home Rule. The English Government sends emissaries into Ireland to stir up discord and the Irish always fall into the trap and have the regular old fashioned Donnellybrook fight on the street.

It sets the cherished wish of their hearts back another quarter of a century but they don't seem to give the future any consideration.

The fever of fight is always in the Irish blood and the flash of a single shalalah in the air is the signal for the flourish of a hundred more.

This sort of thing will be the order of the day in Ireland for some time to come.

A Favored Spot.

The nights are growing cooler, but very gradually, and the thermometer is dropping about one degree a day. Never did winter steal in upon Nevada so quietly and gradually as now.

Summer has blended with Autumn, and now Autumn is merging into Winter with scarcely a breath of frost in the air or a chill in the gentle winds that float down from the Sierras.

In other countries the cyclone devastates the face of nature, snow is falling in the East, the tempest, with mailed hand, has been smiting the British Isles for weeks, the floods are rising in France, but here in Nevada there is nothing but a cloudless sky, balmy air, flowers in bloom and fruit still gleaming upon the trees.

The delinquent tax list will be small, and the Senatorial sack is beginning to tug at the strings around his neck, the farmers are piling up their stacks of hay and the jocund prospector still slams his pick into pay rock and mends the seat of his breeches with Riverside Flour sacks.

Wonder if the Grand Jury will send to San Francisco for that little mulatto girl in order to learn where one of the big "pulls" came in the Davis case.
